Even in modern times, we can find well-documented examples of people who have lived beyond 120 years. The very existence of people who live longer than 120 years disproves the interpretation that God set a limit of 120 years on human lifespan, or else it would make God a liar and suggest that His word is not the final authority in Creation.

We live in the faith and in the hope that when our bodies have been closed up in the tomb, God will take us by the hand too. God will draw us, like Jesus, to life beyond our natural limits. During Easter Vigil, even as we live in the hope that Easter morning brings, we would do well to sit with the closed-up tomb for just a little while.
